LEWIS QUARRIES

We have been extracting Purbeck Stone continuously on the Isle of Purbeck for over 80 Years. Purbeck Limestone is a unique resource as an exceptionally hard marble-like stone which is suitable for both external and internal applications.

It is one of our most versatile British natural stones by virtue of its subtle tonal variations from deep grey/blue to pale beige and extraordinary durability. Traditionally used in churches but equally at home in residential and commercial applications its flexibility also makes it a great option for the seamless continuation of interior flooring to exterior paving.

Aside from Purbeck stone we also draw on a wide range of British sandstones and limestones to supply finished products for flooring, paving and walling including cladding, traditional cobbles, setts, pitchers and flagstones. We can also supply structural landscape products such as rockery stone, landscape boulders and gravel along with small block for use as bank retention.

BANK RETENTION

The unique parallel bedding planes of Purbeck make it an ideal stone for creating retaining walls as it is easier to lay and create vertical faces than some other stones. These bank retention blocks come into their own particularly when creating a scheme incorporating different levels in order to maximise available space.

Where required, Bank Retention Blocks can be supplied predrilled with holes for easy installation using traditional Lewis Pin lifting. To complement Purbeck bank retention blocks Lewis Quarries also has a range of structural landscape products including rockery stone and landscape boulders.

CHURCHES AND HERITAGE

Purbeck stone is widely used in churches and historic buildings, largely because of its durability and spectrum of colours. We have supplied Purbeck stone for many church restoration and re-ordering projects across the UK, as well as other cultural institutions and listed buildings.
